Meg Bowles - Evensong: Canticles for the Earth - 65672

Composer-synthesist Meg Bowles (b.1957) began her musical journey as flutist and completed formal studies in classical music performance at both Northwestern and Boston Universities. Upon her graduation from Boston University in 1979, she chose to embark upon a career in investment banking, and eventually earned an M.B.A. in finance from Columbia University in 1984. After working as a derivatives trader for several years, she left the investment banking field in 1992 to devote more time to pursue advanced studies in shamanism, Jungian psychology, and psychoanalysis, and to create and produce electronic space music. Meg's first two CDs, Inner Space and Solstice Dreams, were released in 1993, followed by critically-acclaimed Blue Cosmos in 1996. During those years she developed a musical association with David Bilger, Principal Trumpet of the Philadelphia Orchestra, which resulted in several commissioned works for trumpet and synthesizer. The first of these commissions, Night Sun Journey, was premiered by Mr. Bilger at the 1996 International Trumpet Guild Brassfest, followed by the premiere of Places Where Rivers Meet at Washington National Cathedral in 1997. These pieces and other works for trumpet and synth are included in the CD From the Dark Earth (1999), with David as the featured soloist.

In addition to receiving airplay on various syndicated programs such as Echoes and Music from the Hearts of Space, Meg's work has appeared on two compilation albums - The Other World (Hypnos Recordings) and Soundscape Gallery 2 (Lektronic Soundscapes), both released in 1998. Meg also contributed the opening and closing soundscapes for the Zodiac series of recordings, a 12-CD classical crossover set released in 1999 by Angel/EMI.

Her fifth CD, A Quiet Light - a collection of six contemplative ambient works which explore reflections of the numinous in nature - was released in 2011, followed by The Shimmering Land in 2013, which was voted Best Ambient Album by Zone Music Reporter. Her co-producer and mastering engineer for all of her recordings is her husband Richard Price, a Grammy award-winning producer, mastering engineer, and president of Candlewood Digital LLC, a classical music recording company based in New Fairfield, Connecticut.

Meg's newest CD, Evensong: Canticles for the Earth (2018) is a meditative reflection upon the ritual spaces of evening, both light and dark, and a tribute to the beauty of planet Earth.

In addition to her work in electronic music composition, Meg is a licensed psychoanalyst and member of the National Association for the Advancement of Psychoanalysis, and has cultivated a private practice specializing in creativity and trauma. She lives in Connecticut with her husband Richard, their daughter Hannah, and their two Akitas.

..51365 Schroeder, Robert - New frequencies vol.3

First of all, give credit where credit is due! Robert Schroeder is a studio beast always on the lookout for a constructive and innovative idea that makes or/and will make progress the world of EM, especially in the style of dance music. This time, he takes us back to his highly stylized EDM universe with the third part of his nEW FREQUENCIES series. Some 8 years after the second part of this series devoted to dance music, our friend Robert still finds new ways to polarize the fruits of his new musical textures on rhythms set on fire by avalanches of percussion and a mixture of digital and analog sequences in a festival of sound effects, new as old ones, where it's better to hear the ears free of headphones in order to seize the unique dimension. The massive use of brass and vocals, both ethereal and true vocals, adds a futuristic Groove & Funk dimension to the whole of "nEW Frequencies Vol. 3" which starts rather soberly.

With a good electronic rock spiced up by an entrance of shattering percussions and radioactive clouds which propagate their effects until the funky approach of the sequencer. Juicy keys hobble zigzagging through snatches of voice and percussions in mode ska beat. A bass line restructures the approach of "Moving Lights" into a very lively rhythm which is well supported by other but soberer percussions. The orchestral arrangements offer a good trio of trumpeters and saxophonists while the voices are the business of a Diva always colorful and whose image of that in The Fifth Element movie cannot be taken off my mind. The musical and sound texture is as rich and diverse as our ears may wish. Sober and half-dressed of sonic artifices, "Moving Lights" is the right title to bring us into the territories of futuristic dances visions of the sound engineer from Aachen. "Life Streams" follows with a kind of Ambient House which has retained its acid character. The rhythm is catchy with organic effects squeaking between the layers of voices, the exaltations of a robot behind a vocoder, the floating guitar blades and the wrenching streaks of synthesizer as acid as psychedelic honey. The vivid sequences and percussive effects in the form of rattlesnakes take the music out of its EDM bed, giving it a cosmic electronic tag. "When I Think" is an up-tempo purified by some fascinating synth solos which are as effective and creative as those of an inspired guitarist. The massive use of vocal effects, not only the layers of voices but the synthesized ones which really sing, brings us into the infinite possibilities of synthesizers.

"Time Transfer" is neither more nor less the equivalent of a revival of Earth, Wind & Fire on a catchy structure of Groove and Funkabilly in a House Acid version. The layers of seraphic voices which surround the ska beat of "Around the World" is one of the few elements of the Berlin School such as seen by Robert Schroeder in the days of his Floating Music album. "Space Horses" is very Rave with vivid sequences and DJ effects in a neo-punk festival. The play of sequences is hyperactive here, while ethereal effects add a floating dimension to a final that must rest its burned sequencer keys by an excess of activity. "Upspace Dreams" is a Groove without borders. Voice effects, explosions of percussions, shearing down of ambiences by synth blades free of cohesion and explosions for a new direction of rhythm are also the prerogative of this title which is undoubtedly the most relaxed one of this album. As incredible as it may seem, but I believe that "My Baby" invents a new dance style. I like this title because of the texture of the percussive effects and its chords filled of a little scent of Western. "Faces" is a meeting point between the old Disco and a Techno for intellectual extra-terrestrials, while "House Music" doesn't really need a description. It means what it means!

Obviously, my lexicon on House, Chill, Ambient Chill and other forms of Neo-Techno styles being limited, I described to the best of my knowledge the many styles of Dance Music in this explosive album from Robert Schroeder who astonishes us once again by the diversity of his sonic discoveries. "nEW Frequencies Vol. 3" is more than just an album of dance music. It's an album of sounds and of musical textures which, assembled in the Schroeder way, find a surprising cohesion through the many elements of noises of the EDM. Each title reveals an auditory secret that surprises and makes you smile, as always. And let's be honest; as long as there are craftsmen like Robert Schroeder, the art, and whatever its forms, will always evolve with this innate concern to surprise and to charm. This is exactly the way to describe this "nEW Frequencies Vol. 3"
