

----- GENERAL NEWS -----

Hi All.

The new Klaus Schulze - COCOONING (cd) 79428 is in stock!

Details/soundclips/ordering: <http://www.groove.nl/jump2.php?artnum=79428>

All pre-order are on their way . And we have copies still in stock.

<http://www.groove.nl/index3.html>

And very excited about these 2 releases!

Erik Seifert & Josef Steinbüchel - Abandoned Places (cd)

Erik Seifert & Josef Steinbüchel - Reverse Engineering (cd)

<http://www.groove.nl/index3.html>

Erik is one of my favorite EM artists, his sound is always superb!

Compositions exciting and fresh! He is a film/movie recording engineer and man you can hear that! High-end sound!

Both Cds came in yesterday so just a bit to late for this weeks

Dreamscape radio but it is on the play list for next week!

And finally after 3 years I have a new album.

ONCE THE DUST SETTLES (cd) gr-259 is the title.

Details/ordering: <http://www.groove.nl/jump2.php?artnum=gr-259>

After 3 years of concerts, turmoil, organizing festivals, running Groove, loosing friends, dumping baggage, Blackmail, a new (same) job, travels and a world that is spinning out of control their just was no energy to create a new album.

The concerts where a great inspiration in these years and together with Monique, my kids (Sam, Dylan, Sanne and Romeo (grandson) and my friends and fellow musicians that are dear to me made it all worth while! It made all the sad, bad and some BIG!! disappointments less influential in my life!

And here it is, ONCE THE DUST SETTLES. The backbone of this album is the concert I played this year in Brussels during the Cosmic Night festival. Johan Geens, Mark de Wit where the partners in crime and the organizers and playing there in that planetarium was a dream come true! One track, A Sense of Turmoil - [7:49] is a completely reworked track from Signs in the Sand. One of my favorite live tracks to play because it works with the big live set up (Stevo, Harold and Francky) but also in the intimate setting of the Brussels performance. The album is again a tribute to the Berlin School way of Electronic music. Sequencing at my best I would say. I hope it will find its way to you and to your heart. Ron.

And this coming Saturday for many a dream comes true.

And Ian Boddy's DiN has an exciting new release!!

BLUETECH - LIQUID GEOMETRIES (cd)

Details/ordering: <http://www.groove.nl/jump2.php?artnum=70814>

Evan Bartholomew has been performing electronic music for nearly 20 years as Bluetech, Evan Marc, Invisible Allies (with Kilowatts), and is one of the founders of MicrodoseVR, with Android Jones and the Vision Agency team. He is an internationally recognised touring music producer with over 27 album/EP releases in the last 15+ years, and has a seasoned portfolio of video game and film/tv scoring credits. Bluetech is a master of analogue and modular sound synthesis and DSP audio manipulation, and brings a passion for sound design and cutting edge audio exploration into all the work he touches. His music transcends the constructs normally associated with a calculated “electronic artist,” pursuing music with meaning and purpose in various styles like ambient and downtempo, future bass, and techno.

“Liquid Geometries” sees him exploring shifting, fractal landscapes of melodic, sequenced lines using a huge range of analogue modular synthesisers. With a distinct nod to the Berlin School masters of the past he upgrades that musical heritage with nine shimmering soundscapes utilising modern production techniques to create beautiful tapestries of sound. These benefit from repeated, deep listening as there are so many details and interlaced patterns that will reveal themselves over time. Evan also invited DiN label boss Ian Boddy to perform using his distinctive Ondes Martenot analogue synth keyboard on the track “Tranquility Gate”. Evan has also got a track, “Magnetic Lullaby”, on the DiN sub-label compilation Tone Science Module No.2 Elements and Particles (DiN:TS02).

Once again the distinctive DiN label is pushing the boundaries of it’s established catalogue with a new addition to it’s roster of fine, internationally acclaimed electronic artists.

Thanks for your time!
Ron Boots

===== Reviews =====

56249 Tronestam, Johan - Planet X The 2018 Version

Composed in the wake of The Island, "Planet X" gets a new sound skin that satisfies a little more the musical vision of Johan Tronestam in 2018 than in 2010. And we can easily understand this need for remastering and the feelings of the Swedish synthesist because the sound fauna of this album, as much at the level of its evolutionary rhythms than its ambiances, is nourished of a diversity which is clearly heard in the different passages of this album proposed in downloadable format and in 24 Bits remaster. As the title suggests it, the listener is immersed in a cosmic universe with a series of titles focused on the concept of communication with aliens. At this level, the game of synths is quite in the tone with tasty extraterrestrial intonations while the ambio-cosmic decor is firmly established by good effects whose research is undeniable. In summary! A very good album of intelligent cosmic rock with subtly evolving rhythms which are not alike from one title to another but are nevertheless from the same genres. Lively and melodious, "Contact" starts "Planet X" in mode dance. The rhythm is sharp and jerky with a series of spasmodic sequences which flow in a hatched cadence. The ambiospheric elements consist of stroboscopic filaments slightly harmonious and fascinating electronic trumpets which sound very Jean-Michel Jarre. "Evidence of life beyond Earth" follows with an ambio-cosmic introduction where a synth sings an ectoplasmic alien chant. The rhythm structure emerges after 60 seconds. A space-rock rhythm which is soft, but dangerously catchy and reminiscent of Batman's music, with a bass line which digs oval shapes zigzagging under the bites of sober electronic percussions. The synth always throws these extra-terrestrial songs in another cosmic setting very close to the influences of Jarre again. Between rock and dance music, "How to Answer" offers an approach which is difficult to pin down, both for its rhythm and its strange vocal melody, as well as its ambience elements. It's a good track which rolls in a rather melodious setting and a good bass line whose flow rides on a good mesh between percussion and sequences. "Response" follows with a very beautiful lunar ballad as moving as cinematographic. A very beautiful title! More in mode Cosmic Blues, "Reflections" follows with a hyper slow rhythm where are succeed harmonious synth solos. "The Star Arpeggiator" takes back the road of electronic rhythms with fire arpeggios flying in orchestral position, a bit like Tomita in Snowflakes are Dancing. The rhythm is more rock on the other hand. Knotted spasms of sequencer and vivid percussion, it hits our eardrums with beautiful synth pads which turn into good solos, always very melodious, and sound effects still in mode cosmos is strange. "They have been Here Earlier" is another good cosmic rock with a fascinating panting rhythm and synth pads in the colors of Twilight Zone. The color of the rhythmic arpeggios is of glass whereas the songs of the synths remain foggy, always close to extraterrestrial incantations. "Closer to Knowledge" offers an evolving structure. The rhythm is disjointed with percussions, which do secondary tam-tams, and sequences forged in an organic language. Synth layers blow a warm mist wind, as well as cosmic jets which constitute the essence of the ambio-cosmic elements of "Planet X". Electric arpeggios are added and tinkle from everywhere while the language stammers on a rhythm which goes for good soft and lively cosmic rock around the 3 minutes. Here as elsewhere, Johan Tronestam waters good solos always very harmonious. "The Linguistic Gap" is the first of the 3 bonus tracks in this new version of "Planet X". It's an ambient title carved around lush synth layers and effects knotted in a cinematic intensity vision. "Beyond our Intellect" is a nice piece of music. A kind of cosmic ballad with a slow pulsating rhythm and some nice melodies from both the synth and a harmonic approach finely strobe. The conclusion of this album comes with its title song still composed in the late 2000's which is a solid cosmic rock as melodious as very catchy. The influences of Jarre dominate this superb structure and end another solid album from an artist who remains at the top of his art.
