GR-297 - Anantayamo - Bertrand Loreau + Frederic Gerchambeau (CD)

<http://www.groove.nl/jump2.php?artnum=GR-297>

This is part 2 of their journey together. 2 Pieces of great Berlin School ! So we find brilliant Berlin School music here. Frédéric Gerchambeau and Bertrand Loreau are two prominent (and current) members of a genre called Berlin School, which, since its birth in the late sixties, has spread throughout Europe - and elsewhere - and still offers us great reminders and nods to what we were already able to do with synths, well before the era of all-digital. If this "school" - it is more discreet in this millennium, and if its teachers and students have grown - some have died, like Edgar Froese - the "hard-liners" who perpetuate gender and analogy against the winds and (raz-de) tides (those of electronica, techno, etc.) are also able to renew it. And, we hope to reach a new audience that was not even born in the early days of analog synths ...

GR-300 - Powerful Waves - James Clent (CD)

<http://www.groove.nl/jump2.php?artnum=GR-300>

The follow up of his great debut album Windows in the Sky. Again powerful songs with guitar and soaring Sequencing and great melodies!

GR10003 - Néphélomancie - Age (cdr)

<http://www.groove.nl/jump2.php?artnum=gr10003>

Clouds are sometimes white, sometimes peaceful, sometimes dark, sometimes threatening. Like storm castles they draw a flamboyant sunset or diaphanous filaments drifting very high. How can we not see them as visible evocations of our moods? How can we not find there a resonance of our emotions? And search a sign of what tomorrow will be? Nephelomancy is about the inspection of clouds as a way to divination.

The music evokes the ever-changing aspects of the sky. During a long non-stop journey it takes you ever higher, to the confines of the atmosphere, where the last clouds, the cirrus clouds, formed of ice crystals, drift peacefully in the purest lights.

GERT EMMENS & RUUD HEIJ - Forgotten Tracks

The triple album Galaxis from 2018 was one of the best Berlin School albums I've heard in recent years and a highlight in the genre for our country. How do you follow up on that? Well, by releasing another beautiful triple cd! The material is not new because it was recorded in the period 2006-2014. Emmens discovered the songs on a hard drive. Three pieces have in one way or another seen the light of day. The sixteen tracks are arranged chronologically. Well, I am very pleased that the gentlemen have released this music because once again we are dealing with a wonderful set of sometimes masterful Berlin School! Opener Velvet Sky, for example, is really such a recognizable Emmens/Heij song: a beautiful sequence, soft chords and a cool solo on the MiniMoog. I like to hear Gert's sound in a piece like Walkabout because of the sequences and the antique drum box. Berlin School often brings me a kind of nostalgic mood. That is certainly the case in Nova Zembla. In beautiful contrast, the first disc ends with a piece of ambient, Abyss. Don't fall into it. Ice, with which disc 2 opens, is a cool title because this is again ambient and quite icy. The sequences return in After The Silence. Gert's signature is also present here. The melodic Somniferous is also without sequences and in my opinion could come straight from Tangerine Dream's Encore. The Mellotron flute has a nice role in Cadence. A wonderfully pointed sequence and a beautiful solo on the MiniMoog can be heard in Bird's Eyes View. Ghostly Presence is again a piece of ambient, almost Brian Eno-ish. A piano is central to Dreamtime. This is really so attractive and cleverly done. Speaking of atmosphere: Departure 8 AM is almost Michael Stearns/Steve Roach-like. A departing steam train ushers in the final song The Tank Engine. What a cool piece: because of the repeating piano loops it almost has a jazzy feel to it in my opinion. According to Emmens they were only playing here. Well, I let them do that more often, much more often. Once again I have a lot of admiration for this great music.

gr-291 Tronestam, Johan - Next Step

It's in a cosmic setting, unique to Johan Tronestam's vision , that NEXT STEPS arrives in the coffers of Groove.nl. Available in manufactured CD and for download, NEXT STEPS explores the confines of Cosmos in search of planets that can be colonized by humans. The 79 minutes of music are built in the purest JT tradition; catchy rhythms interspersed with ambient phases, inspired melodies and great synth solos sunk in cosmic mist. An album that can be listened to and be easily shared with newcomers in EM's realm!

And one of his great strengths is to start his albums with a catchy title, as much in terms of rhythm as in harmonies. It's therefore in a cosmic setting that Departure approaches our ears. Stars make their sparkles sing on the resonant whispers of arpeggios forgotten in the Cosmos. Already, a rhythm line makes its hasty flow heard. Hopping from one key to another, it sets its parameters in an electronic realm where the synth lets its first wandering airs emerge. The percussions arrive at the same time as the intensity sets in. Driven by modulations, the rhythm goes together with sober percussions in cosmic rock mode while the lines of sequences intersect their paces. The synth flows with an oneiric softness, caressing these stars which have never ceased to sparkle with their seraphic harmonies. Singing solos adorn this ambient phase which cuts the Departure's in half route. The title returns with more vigor and with synthesized impulses which make us dance of the head, while the synth sculpts its most beautiful harmonious chants on a structure which begins a circular trip, twirling with vigor like the blades of a helicopter cutting the atmosphere in sharp jerks. This is how Departure is made of, and so are the other seven NEXT STEPS' titles. Moonchild (Back to the Moon) offers a slower rhythm in an infinitely ascending form, like one of these good ambient and cosmic Berlin School. Even slow, this light tempo remains catchy and serves like basis for a magnificent synth weaver of solos and melodies as beautiful in fog banks that make us dream. If the rhythm slightly accentuates its cadence in the second half, the layers of celestial voices are there to make it dream as much as we do. We are entering in a first phase of Dark Ambient with the opening of The First Colony and these buzzing and dark winds that howl in a relative tranquility. The palette of cosmic sound effects and the orchestral waves of the synth help to appreciate this opening of atmospheres which returns to a rhythmic life after another long breath in a cosmic horn. The rhythm is woven into the work of a sequencer and its looped oscillations, as well as sober percussions in mode of electronic rock. The sequencer doubles the bet with another line of sequences more stubborn and of which the crystal-clear tone of the keys takes all the place in loudspeakers. The synth remains noble with lines of melodies coming from solos which roll in symbiosis with this good cosmic rock.

After an ambient opening that flirts with the 4 minutes, 2035 (Red Ground) releases undulating synth layers in what takes the form of a nice electronic ballad. The hopping rhythm of the sequencer accentuates the pace when JT gives it wings with another line which hops in parallel in a race which crosses banks of ocher dust and mists. The synth directs its layers in a rather timid orchestral vision, keeping its charm for good peaceful synth solos which sculpt some nice nostalgic melodious visions. It sounds like Software imitating Jean-Michel Jarre in his Oxygene years. A snap curtly stops this rhythmic ascent which evaporates in a valley of mist. Flyby is also born from the same introductory phenomenon of 2035 (Red Ground) before flying away in a solid electronic rock supported by sober percussions and a line of sequences which skip in block, like the inert action of eggs on a conveyor. The rhythm is very catchy, the most catchy even of NEXT STEPS, while being washed down with particularly good harmonious solos of a creative synth. A great title! After an introduction caramelized of variegated tones and of which the ambiances flirt with the ambient tribal style of a newly discovered planet, Lagrange Point offers one of these ambient cosmic rock unique to JT's repertoire. Footsteps on Titan is another good cosmic rock that stands out by its stationary state, even with the thrusts of the sequencer in a pattern of intersecting rhythm lines which give a nice effect of shift between the two lines. The synth is in symbiosis with this hypnotic rhythm and the foggy chants which are deposited by layers with a tone quite close to Rick Wright's. A melody woven by an electronic guitar throws a little beauty in this title which is a kind of prelude to Home Sweet Home. This ambient title, with a Pink Floyd-style opening à la Wish You Where Here, offers a rhythm without tonus. A rhythm of an electronic shuttle and its pioneers who are tired of traveling and who come home with the weight of adventures, and misadventures, of their cosmic odyssey on their shoulders ... Another good album by Johan Tronestam!

SHIPPING:

Due to the fact that we use a special shipping service that provides the shipping of parcels etc we don't have to adjust the shipping prices at this moment. One of the reasons is that because of you our costumers we can keep these prices so low. With over 1500 parcels shipped last year we can stay in the lowest shipping prices!

I am glad we are one of the few suppliers of EM that did not have to raise their shipping prices. So for the 4rth year in a row they stay the same!!
